

- Time: Typically, internships start from the 2nd year of the PhD program, with a duration of 3-6 months. Ideally, the student can receive a return offer soon after the internship and can work on their final thesis during the internship.
- Collaborators (mentors): Due to the dynamic nature and publication style of industry, it is better to confirm the number and the identity of mentors. Otherwise, the contributions can be unclear.
- Authorship: Student must be the first author. Monash University must be the first institution. The supervisors must be the co-authors of the publications during the internship. The specific requirements regarding the author order (if exist) must be negotiated during the interview.
- Topics: Ensure that the research topics are coherent, enabling the community to identify the specific field in which the student is an expert.
- Supervision: The supervisor should keep the regular meetings with the students so that the contributions are clear enough.
